The surprisingly rich and diverse environments that we encountered on our research trips provided us with the most amazing palette from which to draw. And the art team were inspired to create some breathtaking pieces of concept art. We see these as "thank you" letters to the original Creator of all things.

David's origins are in Israel, so of course the David team spared no expense in making sure they got the story just right! It's one thing to draw inspiration from an image and a very different thing to draw inspiration from the very location in which the story happened. From the desert landscape down to the very stone David threw, Israel inspired every inch.

David Creators and Special guests John Burton and Lynton Levengood tell all about their trip to Israel and how that guided the art of David.

17 "All right," Saul answered. "Find me someone who is good at playing the harp and bring him here."

18 "A man named Jesse who lives in Bethlehem has a son who can play the harp," one official said. "He's a brave warrior, he's good-looking, he can speak well, and the Lord is with him."

Since we made the demo about five years ago, we've delved deeply into pre-production, developing characters, and art concepts.

David's origins are in Israel, and of course, we had to go there. We found rich culture, in addition to diverse and inspiring sceneries.

On this week's Livestream, John Burton and Lynton Levengood will share some of that creative process in a chat with Phil Cunningham.

Join us to discover more about David and how we intend to bring it to you.
